Cami Glauser, 9-year-old daughter of Nanette and Rick Glauser of St. George, does her rendition of "Blow the Candle Out," which will be performed at the Story Telling Festival Tuesday at the Washington County Library. Her candle story has been passed on through generations in her family.

keeps him from puckering. So, he goes over to his neighbor's house to ask her if she can blow the candle out, but she can only blow through her nose, and there isn't enough force to extinguish the flame. The two then go over to the third neighbor's house to have him blow out the candle.

They are sure he can do it because he can blow through his mouth and pucker. He comes over to the candle, puts his pointer finger and thumb in his mouth, moistens them and quickly snuffs out the flame.

End of story. Cami will do it justice with her amazing facial expressions.
