About the presenter:

Lynne Clark opened a photography studio in St. George, Utah in 1968. She was frequently asked by a to make a copy of a very old photo so they might share copies with their relatives. Clark, being interested in history, sometimes asked if she could make a copy for herself.

Permission was always given. She soon realized no one had collected the historic photographs of Southern Utah, and knowing the value of the images, she began the Lynne Clark Collection. The number of photos in the collection now number more than 15,000.

In 1986, Lynne began creating a book of historic photos of the Cotton Mission - which included most of Southern Utah. The book was well under way, when, on January 5, 1989, Lynne suffered a debilitating stroke. It took several years to recover.

Ms. Clark still felt an urgency to tell the story of the faithful people who settled Southern Utah, their lives and how they worked, but it would not be until 2009 that she once again returned to her effort to publish a book of pictures and history of the area. With the with the 150 year sesquicentennial of St. George, Utah, fast approaching, Lynne focused her efforts on creating a book that would chronical a pictorial history of the town. Images of Faith, with 400 pages and 1400 photos, was completed in November, 2012.
